자기소개서

Growth

Immediately after graduating from the third year of middle school, I started my high school course in Vancouver, Canada, for a new challenge. In order to continue my studies in unfamiliar languages and cultures, I recorded my English vocabulary every day and developed my expressive ability through conversations with local friends after class. Thanks to these efforts, I succeeded in entering college while maintaining my academic achievement, and I completed my university course in Toronto. The experience of collaborating with people from various backgrounds and solving problems has nurtured my attitude of respecting cultural diversity and my ability to quickly adapt to new environments. Such adaptability and open-mindedness will greatly help me respond flexibly to changes and communicate smoothly with various stakeholders in future jobs.

Personality

I have the advantage of adapting quickly to a new environment and communicating smoothly with various people. Especially when I was studying in Canada, I developed my collaboration skills by working on team projects with friends from different cultures and coordinating opinions with different interests. On the other hand, in the past, when faced with difficult tasks or unfamiliar situations, I had the habit of taking a step back or turning my eyes away. However, through military service, the process of carrying out duties with responsibility has changed to a challenging personality, in which I face everything directly and find a solution. Currently, they actively deal with given tasks, and they respond faster and maintain an attitude of finding solutions as they face difficulties.

Capabilities

Through my major in computer engineering, I acquired systematic knowledge of overall IT, including programming. In the school project, we developed web applications and data processing programs using C# and JSX, and acquired database connection and utilization capabilities including MongoDB. In addition, I developed the habit of actively learning and applying to quickly adapt to new programs or work environments.

Application

I value the attitude of working with all my heart at every moment. Even in a new environment, I have motivated myself and actively adapted, and I have always done my best with a sense of responsibility for my job. Based on this passion and sincerity, I applied because I want to grow together in your company and produce meaningful results.
